Dear Mr. Dalzell:

The Company and Union have had recent discussions regarding the collection of overpayments made to approximately 80 employees enrolled in our apprentice programs.

On a pilot basis, the Company would like to offer these impacted Apprentices an opportunity to sell vacation to help repay the Company for overpayments received. The following provisions will apply:

- Vacation hours already accrued can be used to reduce the total amount owed -- with the remaining balance being paid via personal check, full payroll deduction, or installment payroll deduction (typically up to 10 payments).
- If the employee has enough existing hours, the employee may elect to repay the entire amount.
- If the employee has already scheduled time off, but no longer has available vacation hours accrued at the time of the scheduled time off as a result of selling the hours to resolve an overpayment, the employee will still be allowed to take time off, but must take the time off without pay.
- The employee may elect to sell all available accrued vacation hours if they so choose up to the amount needed to resolve the overpayment.
- All other vacation accrual rules will remain in effect -- (employee will continue to accrue vacation hours as normal).
- The Payroll department will confirm the total # of hours available for sale and the net effect of the sale (i.e., 100 hours available, total value = x, total overpayment = y). Employees will be required to sign a statement indicating the total # of hours that they would like to sell and apply to their overpayment, their preferred option to repay the remaining amount and their signed authorization for the vacation sale and repayment election. Payroll will then process the election.
- Employee election to sell vacation to resolve overpayments MUST be made at the time the employee indicates their repayment preference.

This agreement is without prejudice to the Union's position on the overpayments. The Company understands that the Union is not waiving its right to grieve any collections that they believe are not warranted.

Mr. Tom Dalzell
