Sierra Pacific agreement goes out for ratification

Negotiators for IBEW Local 1245 and Sierra Pacific Power Co. reached a table agreement on Dec. 12 that raises wages and improves benefits, union Business Rep. Randy Osborn reported. The agreement is subject to ratification by members.

The three-year agreement raises wages 3% effective the first full pay period after ratification, 3.25% in January of 2004, and 3.75% in January 2005. Employees will receive a lump sum payment of $200 in lieu of making the first-year wage increase retroactive to Jan. 1.

The table agreement improves the retirement plan by providing that all accrued sick leave at retirement will be added to years of service for purposes of calculating retirement benefits.

"I want to thank both the company and the union committees for their hard work and dedication to getting a quality product," Osborn told the Utility Reporter. The agreement makes improvements to the 401k plan. Previously, contributions were capped at 17%. Under the proposed agreement the cap would track the IRS limit as it rises.

The union negotiated equity adjustments for 27 classifications, to be phased in over 3 years. The size of the adjustment varies among classifications.

Another important feature of the table agreement is the addition of language to protect employees in the event the company enters bankruptcy. The agreement requires the company to support the agreement in front of the bankruptcy judge and

Members overwhelmingly reject PG&E table agreements

Members of IBEW Local 1245 by a wide margin voted down table agreements negotiated with Pacific Gas and Electric. In ballots counted Dec. 10, the agreement covering Physical members was rejected 963 to 5713, while the Clerical agreement was rejected 408-1237.

Turnout for the vote was very high, with over 71% of Physical members voting and over 57% of Clerical members voting.

Thirty ballots were disqualified. The Local 1245 bargaining committee met Dec. 11 to evaluate the results of the balloting and to plan the union's next step. The committee was slated to meet again following the holidays.

Business Manager Perry Zimmerman said the union would create an on-line survey around the first of the year to give Local 1245 members at PG&E an opportunity to re-state their priorities for the next round of bargaining. "Our members have spoken at the ballot box. We know they want their service to the company to be fairly compensated, and that the table agreements did not meet their expectations," said Zimmerman. "The on-line survey will give them an opportunity to tell us very specifically what their top priorities are."

Zimmerman praised the efforts of the union's bargaining committee members, which he credited with working extremely hard on a complex task. "There is a wealth of expertise on this committee, and we'll need that expertise when we go back into bargaining," Zimmerman said, noting that the exact size and make-up of the committee would be determined in coming days.

Serving on the ballot committee for the Dec. 10 vote-count were: Leroy Foster, Rick Davis, Vida Anderson, Sal Lozano, Shawn Rocha, Steve Pettigrew, Larry Gibson, Ken Amaral and Cormac Downey.

Serving as judge of the election was Jim Findley.
On December 10, ballots were counted in the ratification vote on the PG&E table agreement. With an extremely high voter turnout and by extremely large margins, our members rejected the table agreement.

On December 13, the wind and rain storms began.

The connection between the vote and the storms is hard to miss.

As I write this column, thousands of our members have worked 12 days without a day off in an effort to restore service to millions of PG&E customers affected by the storms. Many have worked nothing less than a 16-hour day for a week and a half. Much of the work has been in storm conditions, where the weather presents an additional element of danger beyond the routine risks of working at heights and in near proximity to high voltage.

Title 200, Title 300, and Clerical employees from PG&E as well as hundreds of Outside Construction members—have barely seen their families, if at all, during the one time of year when American families most want to be together. As these Pacific storms continue pounding the California coast, it seems likely that thousands of our members will be away from their families working on Christmas and New Year's.

But our members have not complained about these exhausting levels of overtime. In fact, many have offered to continue working even after being told to go rest.

On the opening day of our negotiations with PG&E last summer, I emphasized the contribution made by Local 1245 members to the company’s success.

I said that Local 1245 members had suffered a decade or more of uncertainty due to deregulation and then bankruptcy.

I said that Local 1245 members had stood by PG&E before the CPUC, in bankruptcy court, and in fights against municipalization.

I said that Local 1245 members had watched management be rewarded for its loyalty to the company in hard times. And I said that the company values and rewards loyalty and hard work.

Okay goose, how about the gender?

The storms establish in a painfully obvious manner who it is that keeps the lights on and gas flowing.

We do.

The storms establish unequivocally the loyalty and willingness of our members to work hard.

Today, 12,000 IBEW members are doing the work that 17,000 were doing a decade ago. Basic arithmetic shows just that means. We now do the work with 30% fewer people. To accomplish this, the remaining workers must work 42% harder. They are, and then some.

In January, we will return to the bargaining table knowing several things.

We know that our members were not satisfied with the last table agreement. We know that, despite this near-universal dissatisfaction, they have responded to the wind and rain storms with a dedication and professionalism that is nothing less than heroic. And we know that whatever good will PG&E enjoys among the public is largely the product of our members’ work.

Our members are right to expect that their work be properly recognized at the bargaining table.
Taking care of the members

Gentlemen and Ladies:

Over my work life I was always employed. Whenever I left one job I had another waiting. Actually it was rock steady.

When I graduated High school I enlisted in the Air Force rather than be drafted. After the four years in the service I took a week off. Then by Wednesday of the next week I had a job at United Air Lines.

I was going to go to college but my father had two very bad heart attacks so I determined to work full time to help my parents instead. Then I decided to get a trade and applied for a sheet metal and machinist apprenticeships. I decided on the Machinists and went to work for the American Can Co.

I was there for over 17 years when they closed the doors. I had a job waiting for me at a hole in the wall machine shop. Within a year my own family and I moved to the East Bay, Antioch in particular. I was there three months when I found my last job at Pittsburg Power Plant.

What a difference and change I went through. I had been an in-shop Machinist and Tool and Die Maker. Now I was maintaining turbines, valves, fans, toilets, etc.

But the best part of all was working with a company and union that actually worked together to avoid strikes. Every time a contract was up while I was an in-shop Machinist we went on strike. In those years only one contract was agreed upon where we didn’t go on strike.

The IBEW has always taken better care of it’s members than the Machinist union did when I was in it. For that I am very grateful.

I got to retire at 55. Actually I am on LTD. The doctors retired me. Without LTD I would not have my own home because of the loss of income if I were to depend on the states disability plan.

Now this year the IBEW has worked very hard to improve LTD and the regular pension.

Gentlemen and Ladies, I thank you.

Gary Champagne, LTD

Thank you for your support

Dear Local 1245:

I want to thank the members of IBEW for the kindness and support you gave our family after the death of my husband, Tim Ruiz, who died Nov. 5. Tim began his IBEW apprenticeship in 1985 and on Oct. 18, 1988 he achieved his dream of becoming a journeyman power lineman. The support of the union during this time has meant a lot to our family and I wanted to say thank you.

PG&E storm response prompts public praise ... & promises of probes

California Public Utilities Commission President Loretta Lynch said the commission would investigate widespread outages during December’s storms.

Lynch indicated she wanted to look at PG&E’s system upkeep, its call center performance and its response time in fixing outages.

Another investigation was promised by Sarah Reyes, chair of the Assembly’s Utilities Committee.

A spate of stories about PG&E’s performance dominated the news media during the height of the storm. While many customers expressed appreciation for the efforts of employees in the field, others questioned whether PG&E was adequately prepared.

About 2 million PG&E customers had lost power at one time or another as the Christmas holiday approached, victims of a series of storms that paraded out of the northern Pacific and wreaked havoc on the utility’s poles and wires.

General Construction Subforeman “A” Ron Vessels was thrust into the limelight by a San Francisco Chronicle story on Dec. 20 that examined in detail the grueling hours and difficult conditions endured by PG&E workers.

“For us, the greatest part of the whole job is turning on the power again and hearing people yell with happiness,” Vessels told the Chronicle. “We leave our own families at home in the dark with no power, sometimes, when we come out here,” he said. “I’ve missed all kinds of special events with my kids because of the long hours, and I’ll miss Christmas again this year if the storm kicks up again. But I’ll tell you—there’s not much of a better feeling in this world than hearing that yell.”

Double-time expanded for storm

Local 1245 Business Manager Perry Zimmerman on Dec. 19 signed a Letter Agreement with Pacific Gas & Electric Co. that authorizes special double-time pay for Preventive Overtime on non-workdays during a series of severe winter storms.

Letter Agreement 02-63, which took effect upon signing, applied to Title 200 and 300 gas and electric employees in Operations, Maintenance and Construction (OM&C).

Normally the overtime premium for the first 12 hours on a non-workday is time-and-a-half. The special double-time premium was to remain in effect for the duration of the storm, but no later than Dec. 31.
Australia Post wins 'Worst Boss' award

Australia Post was named "winner" of the inaugural Tony Award for Australia's worst boss, Australia's Daily Telegraph reported.

The award is sponsored by the New South Wales Labor Council and named after Workplace Relations Minister Tony Abbott who once famously said that a bad boss was better than no boss.

Labor Council secretary John Robertson said Australia Post won because of a string of petty, unfair management decisions that "continued to push the envelope for workplace bastardry."

Recent cases where Australia Post has come under fire for treatment of employees include:

• Docking $3000 from call center worker Cori Girodoudas for having too many personal photographs on her desk.

• Forcing Sydney post sorter Richard O'Brien on to sick leave because he was overweight.

• Ending Post Office worker Sarah Daghlian's career by taking away the stool she had relied on for 12 years to relieve discomfort in her legs.

• Sacking postal worker Maree Marshall and reporting her to police after she kicked a faulty door. Ms Marshall was reinstated after her story appeared in The Daily Telegraph.

The other Labour Council award finalists included Virgin Mobile for allegedly undercutting union wages and Tasmanian mine operator Barminco for docking workers for sick days and being late with their pay.

Unemployment, outages, pathogens and voodoo

Nearly 800,000 jobless workers were slated to lose their unemployment benefits on Dec. 28 after the Bush administration and Republican leaders in the US House of Representatives refused to approve a Senate bill that would have extended emergency unemployment benefits for three months. A Dec. 19 study by the nonpartisan Center for Budget and Policy Priorities called for extending and strengthening the Temporary Emergency Unemployment Compensation (TEUC) program because the nation is experiencing a 6% unemployment rate, the highest level in eight years. The report also found that extending the benefits would stimulate the sluggish economy.

Union Voodoo? Management at a nursing home in a Miami suburb and union organizers for SEIU have reached a settlement over allegations of voodoo, nbc6.net reported. Management of Mount Sinai-St. Francis Nursing and Rehabilitation Center earlier this year had accused union organizers of using voodoo tactics to scare workers into voting to unionize. Union officials had complained that the nursing home had created an atmosphere of intimidation by spying on workers and threatening them as they handed out union fliers.

Outages Blamed on Staff Cuts: Electricity company staff cutbacks have been blamed for hundreds of thousands of homes being left without power after late-October storms in Great Britain, BBC News reported. Union leaders are warning that a shortage of routine maintenance workers could mean more blackouts. Amicus, the UK's largest manufacturing union, says there are not enough staff employed to trim trees growing too close to power lines. It estimates that up to 15,000 jobs have been axed from the electricity distribution network over the past five years.

Outages & Biohazards: A three-hour power failure at the Plum Island Animal Disease Center in New York last month renewed concerns about the safety of the high-security government laboratory while it is being run partly by replacement workers during a five-months strike, the New York Times reported. The loss of power and failure of all three backup generators raised fears that the containment of infectious pathogens could have been seriously compromised at the laboratory.

Off the Clock at Wal-Mart: A federal court jury in Portland, Ore., found Dec. 19 that Wal-Mart managers violated federal wage laws by forcing employees to work overtime without pay, aflcio.org reported. More than 400 Oregon Wal-Mart employees are seeking damages for performing off-the-clock work in a class-action lawsuit.

Toxic Poles: The Communications Workers of America joined Beyond Pesticides, an environmental group, in a federal lawsuit filed Dec. 10 to stop the continued use of highly toxic wood preservatives linked to a wide range of health problems including cancer, birth defects, kidney and liver damage and neurological disorders, aflcio.org reported. Workers can be exposed through contact with utility poles.

Huge Back Pay Settlement: About 212,000 current and former federal employees will share $173.5 million in back-pay in a 20-year-old wage dispute. The settlement will reimburse thousands of federal workers who were denied certain salary increases from 1982 to 1988 because of an Office of Personnel Management regulation.

Controllers' Hunger Strike: Several hundred air traffic controllers in Siberia went on a hunger strike—continued to work—as they sought a 35% increase in their current monthly salary of 15,000 roubles ($470), BBC News reported. Unlike their counterparts in high-profile airports in Moscow and St Petersburg, Russia's provincial air traffic controllers suffer the same sort of low pay and wage arrears as other state and municipal employees.

35-Hour Week Dumped: France's 35-hour week was dumped last month by President Jacques Chirac, the Chicago Sun-Times reported. Lionel Jospin, the former Socialist prime minister, started the 35-hour week to in an effort to create jobs and give workers more leisure time.
Sierra Pacific table agreement

To everything a season . . .

The dog days of summer seem a distant memory as the West Coast reeled under the impact of ferocious winter storms at the close of 2002. But last summer's fire season had a ferocity all its own, keeping Sierra Pacific Power crews hard at it for weeks on end.

Working to repair fire-related damage along Highway 395 south of Holbrook, Nev. in late July was the Sierra Pacific crew of Frank Riger, Upgraded Foreman; Paul Wiles and Greg Dydo, Linemen; and Randy Micky, Operator. General Foreman was Jim Richardson.

Members of the bargaining committee, along with Business Reps. Osborn and Santiago Salazar, visited every Sierra Pacific headquarters the week of Dec. 16 to explain the agreement to members. Ballots were mailed Dec. 16. To be valid, completed ballots must be received by the union no later than 10 a.m. on Jan. 3, 2003.

Union members serving on the bargaining committee are: Gino Aramini, Gary Bailey, Rita Weisshaar, Vickie Borst, Glenn Buschine, Tom Cornell, Scott Downs, Mike Grimm, Dale Huntsman, Casey Kottke and Wayne Patterson, along with Business Reps. Osborn and Salazar.

to take “every reasonable” step to persuade the judge to permit the company to honor the terms and conditions of its labor agreement with IBEW.

The table agreement requires the company to make “every reasonable effort” to find limited duty work assignment for an employee who needs it due to illness or injury. When possible, the company is to make such work available at the employee’s own headquarters.

Under the table agreement, the Long Term Disability benefit (non-taxable) is set at 60% of the normal wage, down from the existing 66%. However, the agreement increases the cap on this benefit from the current $2,500/month to $10,000/month.

The table agreement also:

♦ Increases rest period from 9 to 9.5 hours.

♦ Increases the shift premium to $1.15 for second shift and $1.35 for third shift.

♦ Improves meal expense language.

♦ Adds a requirement for company to respond within 30 days to an Accident Committee recommendation.

♦ Adds a Commercial Drivers License requirement to Field Clerk, Customer Serviceman District, and Serviceman Electric in order to increase the pool of available drivers.

♦ Provides a short-term incentive plan of 3.5% of wages each year.

Domestic violence: where to seek help

United States lags on maternity leave

Although wages in the United States outpace pay in most other nations, this country falls behind the rest of the world on paid maternity leave. The United States is one of only six nations that does not guarantee, through corporate or government compensation, paid leave for women when they give birth. The others are Australia, Lesotho, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea and Swaziland, according to a survey conducted by a United Nations agency.

Are you in an abusive relationship?

If so, don't despair. There are a number of places you can turn to for help.

But first, be careful how you proceed. Don't let your abuser know you are seeking help. If he finds out, he may try to thwart your efforts to get help. Worse still, he might escalate the abuse.

So who can help?

According to Maria Vera and Toby Goldsmith of the University of Florida, you should consider seeking help from those who know you best: family and friends.

However, they caution it may be necessary to seek professional guidance. Medical and mental health professionals can treat the physical and emotional injuries you may already have suffered. They can provide the treatment or medications you need, either directly or by recommending programs specially designed to help victims of domestic violence.

It is important to remember that emotional wounds can be just as damaging to you as physical wounds. Counselors can help to heal these emotional wounds.

If you are in immediate danger and need emergency help, you should call 911. The police can arrest your abuser, help you get a restraining order, take you to a battered women's shelter or take you for emergency medical care.

Courts can issue a restraining or protective order to keep your abuser away from where you live and work. The order becomes effective as soon as it is issued. It can be extended or made permanent if necessary.

People who violate restraining orders are considered to be in contempt of court and may be arrested and taken to jail. The violation of a restraining order usually results in a criminal charge and the violator may serve time in jail.

Don't be afraid to seek help and utilize the resources that are available in your community. There is no excuse for abuse. If you don't feel safe in your home, take action to protect yourself before the problem becomes worse.

Slips and falls

In the early decades of the 20th century slapstick comedy was all the rage.
Comedians like Charlie Chaplin and Harold Loyd made millions laugh with their seemingly endless prat-falls and “busters” on the silver screen. And they made big dollars doing it!
Today most people view slapstick as unsophisticated, yet it’s hard not to chuckle at an unexpected fall or slip.
Unfortunately, in the real world, slips and falls have a more costly consequence. Sprained ankles, torn muscles and bruised backs are frequently the result of failing to watch where we are walking.
Unlike the screen slips and falls of Chaplin and Loyd, slips and falls in the real world cost big dollars instead of earning them.

Working with oils

Whether it is hydraulic oil or transformer oil, working with oils can be a health issue.
Those who are engaged on the job with these types of oils must take care of clothing, gloves and boots, and wash hands as soon as possible after contact with these oils.
Inspect all your equipment for leaks. Check hoses and fittings. If you operate a bucket truck you will most likely be confronted with oils. Footing on top of your platform will get very slippery when oil is present, making accidents more likely.
Cleanliness can be a life saver.

Safety Tailboard

Question: Where else can I go, other than my employer, to get Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS) for products that I use at my workplace?
Answer: By the nature of your question you apparently are aware that by law your employer is required to keep up to date and accessible MSDS sheets on all products at your workplace. However, if you have access to a computer an excellent website to check is MSDSolutions.com. On this site you can access over 1 million MSDS’s published by 15,000 manufacturers. You must have a product name and manufacturer and set up for a free account. If you don’t have Internet access you can call 1-888-255-6737 ext. 211.

Bosses in driver’s seat at OSHA

The Bush administration continues to embrace pro-management groups and “experts” to the near exclusion of workers and their unions in its workplace safety and ergonomics policy panels, according to the AFL-CIO.

On Dec. 3, the administration announced formation of a national advisory committee on ergonomics that includes seven management representatives and just two union safety and health experts. It is the first time in the Occupational Safety and Health Administration’s 32-year history that an advisory committee does not include an equal number of management and union representatives.

That action follows OSHA’s recent formation of several “alliances” with industry groups to study workplace safety and ergonomics. But not one of these so-called alliances includes workers or their unions.

In fact, the business-backed groups on both the ergonomics advisory committee and in the alliances worked against establishment of a federal ergonomics standard during the decade-plus fight to win the safety protection and applauded the Bush administration’s support and eventual repeal of the ergonomics standard just weeks after Bush occupied the White House.

It’s worker safety, Bush-style.
Market losses derail retirement dreams

Stock market losses have derailed retirement dreams for 20% of older workers and caused many retirees to go back to work.

One-fourth of American stock owners between age 50 and 70 report that their investments have fallen 25% to 50% in value the past two years, according to a study released last month by the American Association of Retired Persons. Many have been forced to compensate by postponing retirement.

As fewer companies offer traditional pensions, and with Social Security being threatened with privatization, the ability to save and invest wisely has become increasingly important to US workers. Longer life expectancies also mean that Americans must stretch savings. But nearly 41 million Americans worked at companies that didn’t offer any retirement plan last year. An additional 12 million didn’t participate in the plans their companies did offer, according to a Congressional Research Service report.

Cuts target ill and aging

Even before California’s projected budget deficit ballooned to $35 billion in mid-December, Gov. Gray Davis targeted an array of services to the elderly and ill for cuts.

In his package of cuts and savings announced in early December, Davis proposed cutting spending for health and social services by $2 billion. The package also called for cutting funds for public schools by $3.1 billion this year and in the 2003-04 budget year that begins July 1.

As is often the case when government spending contracts, those with the least power end up bearing the greatest burdens. Among the programs slated for slicing and dicing: syringes for diabetics and payments to nursing homes that care for 200,000 aging and infirm Californians.

In health care, among Davis’ proposals are recommendations to eliminate payments for dental care and to stop paying for medical supplies such as rubber sheets for poor people. Many experts said in firm people need such supplies to remain in their homes and avoid going to nursing homes. Davis also urges a 10% cut in payments to nursing homes, after having embarked on a push two years ago to improve nursing-home care.

At an annual cost of $9.8 billion, the Medi-Cal program pays the health-care costs of 6.4 million indigent elderly and disabled people each month. Davis proposes to trim $167 million from Medi-Cal starting in the third quarter of the 2002-03 fiscal year. If spread over a full year, that could translate to nearly 7% of the total spent on Medi-Cal.

It is not yet clear whether payments to nursing homes and health care for the elderly will face even steeper reductions in light of the budget figures released on Dec. 18, which indicated a deficit of $35 billion.

As part of this “aging with dignity initiative,” the governor in his first term boosted payments to nursing homes by 10%, and ordered pay raises and improved training for nursing home workers.

Signs for Concern

Even workers who have retirement savings accounts typically don’t save enough, and what they have saved has been squeezed by the bear market.

Among the recent signs for concern:

■ Among stock owners 50 to 70 years old who have lost money in the stock market and have not yet retired, about 20% have already postponed retirement as a result of their losses, AARP said. Among retirees who have lost money in the stock market, 3% returned to work since March 2000.

■ In early 2000—at the peak of the stock market bubble—the median value of retirement savings accounts amounted to just $18,000, according to the congressional study.

■ In 2002, 15% of workers said they had not saved anything for retirement, according to a survey by the Employee Benefit Research Institute. And 27% of workers ages 40 to 59 said they have less than $10,000 saved for retirement.
