Review Committee File No. 613
De Sable Division Grievance No. 10-64-16

Discussions on R. C. #613 regarding Company practice on using Troublemakers for radio and television interference complaints, brought out that Troublemakers are only used for first contact and routine checking for possible sources of interference. The use of a special Troublemaker to do this work is not contemplated for the future and has not been the practice in the past. Except for minor repairs to eliminate interference, the Troublemakers are limited to locating sources of trouble and the complaint is then referred to the maintenance crews for correction and elimination of the problem.

It was further stated that Troublemakers use only a small portable radio for detection of sources and when a source is not readily located by this means, or when complicated detection devices are to be used, this work is then performed by a Communication Technician.

With the understanding that the above limits on Troublemakers are correct and a further understanding that the use of supervisory employees to perform this work is not contemplated, Union is withdrawing R. C. #613 from the file and will consider the matter closed.
